Muses and take refuge in the Helicon of olden times. If a man has a passion for a costly harlot, we cannot bring Penelope on stage, nor marry Pantheia<sup>a</sup> to him; but it is possible to take a man who is enjoying mimes and tunes and lyrics that are bad art and bad taste, and lead him back to Euripides and Pindar and Menander, 'washing the brine from the ears with the clear fresh water of reason,' in Plato's words.<sup>b</sup> For just as sorcerers advise those possessed by demons to recite and name over to themselves the Ephesian letters,<sup>c</sup> so we, in the midst of such warblings and caperings,

Stirred by frenzies and whoops to the tumult of tossing heads,<sup>d</sup> if we bethink ourselves of those hallowed and venerable writings and set up for comparison songs and poems and tales of true nobility, shall not be altogether dazed by these performances, nor shall we surrender ourselves, as it were, to float reclining on the gentle stream of the music."

QUESTION 6

On "shadows," so-called, and whether one should go to one man's dinner at another man's invitation, and on what occasions, and to what kind of host.

Speakers: Plutarch, Florus, Caesernius

1. HOMER represents Menelaüs as coming uninvited
